Redevelopment Commission to fund 4 Destination Madison projects

BY MARK CAMPBELL

Madison's Redevelopment Commission (RDC) on Tuesday approved the allocation of $800,000 in funding for four new Destination Madison projects to go with another $921,200 in state Regional Economic Acceleration and Development Initiative (READI) dollars.

The four shovel-ready projects range from an expansion of the local trails system to restoring the facade of the Ohio Theatre and building a new super overlook and parking lot along the city's Ohio River front.

The request came after the City of Madison ended up with more than $900,000 dollars left over from the $2.6 million READI grant received earlier this year to construct a new gateway to the city and Mulberry Street arts corridor. The city awarded projects totaling $1,635,000 out of the $2,556,200 READI allocation and now plans to use the remaining $921,200 to push the four previously identified and well-developed Destination Madison projects to fruition along with $800,000 from the RDC.

MORNING FIRE GUTS HOME

Above: Battalion Chief Travis Conover (center) surveys the scene after an early morning fire gutted a home in the 1000 block of Park Avenue in downtown Madison. The fire was reported at about 2:30 a.m. Wednesday and City of Madison firefighters battled the blaze for about three hours before then working to clear the scene and reopen State Road 56. The fire was contained to the home and not allowed to spread to the nearby wooded hillside north of the home. The cause of the blaze is still under investigation.

The fire, reported at about 2:30 a.m. Wednesday, was on a narrow section of the street shared with State Road 56, limiting access to equipment and closing the highway for several hours.

Redevelopment declares emergency to expedite Sunrise Crossing intersection

Lack of bids, deadline forces action

BY MARK CAMPBELL

Facing a deadline to construct a new intersection and traffic signals on Michigan Road for the Shoppes at Sunrise Crossing development on Madison's hilltop, the city's Redevelopment Commission on Tuesday took the rare decision of declaring that project an emergency so the city can negotiate with potential contractors without advertising for bids a third time

The Redevelopment Commission approved the intersection and traffic signals as an inducement to landing the national retail center earlier this year and agreed to a penalty clause to guarantee that work will be done by May 31, 2023. Two rounds of bids on the project have produced no offers and the city is now facing a race to get the project done on time.

According to Tony Steinhardt III, the city's director of economic development, the hangup is due to a combination of factors. Contractors who have the expertise to do such work — especially installation of traffic signals — already have more work than they can accomplish due to the numerous road projects taking place throughout the region and the Madison project is small enough that contractors are opting for larger projects that provide more work and justify their efforts to transport equipment and personnel to the site.

GIRLS

"It's fun to see that," she said, but even more "it's wonderful what the girls have achieved with their lives as they have grown into adulthood. The fact they went through our programs at Girls Inc. means a lot."

When Girls Inc. began in Jefferson County in 1972, it was called Girls Club of America. In 1990, the national organization's name changed to Girls Inc. and the focus changed to developing girls into serious business people who are healthy, educated and independent.

For the first 10 years in Jefferson County, the Girls Club moved among various locations throughout the county including renting space in the evenings at the K of P building. In 1981, the building at 109 West Third Street was purchased, and has remained as Girls Inc's location ever since. Establishing a permanent home there has allowed Girls Inc. to thrive.

Today, Girls Inc. continues to offer programs at its downtown Madison building, but is also expanding its outreach into the county where girls who are unable to get to downtown Madison also have the opportunity to participate. Girls Inc. has also expanded into Switzerland County.

Stahl said Girls Inc. is helping "to fill the gap" for girls who need support.

"It provides a safe place for them," she said, while helping to equip them to have successful lives. "That's what's so magical about it."

At the same time, Stahl is disheartened that problems that existed when she was a girl, still exist today. "They're still struggling with body image," she said.

Stahl said there are also issues with exploring careers that involve math and science as well as economic literacy with finances but Girls Inc. is working to help girls with all those issues and more, and she hopes that "being there for the girls every day" will help them overcome those hurdles.

Stahl said none of what Girls Inc. does could be achieved without community support. "They are everything to us," she said of the organization's donors and supporters. "We have had wonderful friends and donors who continue to support us."

She said many support Girls Inc. through the Champions for Girls program with pledges of $1,000 or more, but "all donors at every level" make an impact.

On Friday, Girls Inc will told a celebration at the Historic Eagle Cotton Mill Fairfield Inn & Suites by Marriott, 108 St. Michaels Ave., from 6-8 p.m. with a short program at 7 p.m. "Everyone is invited," she said. There is a suggestion donation of $30 per person.

PROJECTS

"It's pretty exciting that we can bring to fruition this level of projects and acknowledge the valuable participation of our partners across the community," Madison Mayor Bob Courtney said. "Our continued focus on public-private partnerships has proven successful, and we are thankful to the Redevelopment Commission for their support of this investment in our community."

Tony Steinhardt III, the city's director of economic development, said the projects will amount to about $7 million in overall investment and produce a 7.5 to 1 return on the Redevelopment Commission's dollars as private donations, a state Next Level Trails Grant, the READI funds and city dollars are all combined.

Some of the money was originally earmarked for a proposed Bicentennial Park amphitheater and additional funding for parks and recreation. But with the state indicating that a READI 2.0 may be coming out of the next legislative session, the city opted to allocate the remaining funding elsewhere since the amphitheater and parks projects seem like good projects to propose in the next round of grants.

"As we started to understand more in the last couple of months about the state of Indiana's idea of having a READI 2.0, which will go in front of the legislature next year, and the recognition that we'd be required to raise additional bond capital for those projects, the mayor, along with myself and others have decided that we think those would be ideal projects to move into the READI 2.0 category and let the RDC dollars leverage themselves even more than we hoped for currently," said Steinhardt.

The projects to be funded include a supporting grant match for the proposed Madison-Hanover College Connector Trail, a dollar for dollar match to the Friends of the Ohio Theatre to finish the exterior and restore the marquee of the historic movie house, more funding for the Riverfront Development Committee's super overlook, and a new 85-space parking lot south of First Street east of Poplar Street near Bicentennial Park.

In addition to the remaining READI dollars those projects will still need about $800,000 in RDC funding and the Commission approved that commitment Tuesday.

CONNECTOR TRAIL

"This project is closer to reality than one might envision given that it is 6 miles long," Hanover College's Kay Stokes said of the connector trail. "And that's because we have contiguous property ownership between Hanover College, IKEC, Clifty Fall State Park, the City of Madison and the Heritage Trail Conservancy. We own the vast majority of the property needed to make this trail happen."

Stokes said the trail currently is proposed to run from Madison to Clifty Falls State Park where 500,000 to 800,000 people visit annually but there are options that could extend the trail along the Ohio River to Hanover Beach and then on to Saluda Hill and the county line.

"For the price we're out now you get the 6 miles plus another 8 miles and that gets up within shouting distance of the county line and the Regional Development Authority's desire to have what they call a world class trail system in the five county region," Stokes said. "Someday people would be able to come to Madison and use Madison as a trail head to hike or bike all the way into the Jeffersonville area and into Louisville. That's the broad vision we're looking at here."

"National studies show time and time again that property values associated with and connected to a trail system increase much more rapidly that those that are not," Steinhardt said. "So this is certainly a great project for all and a great project for the county."

OHIO THEATRE

Elizabeth Auxier, of the Friends of the Ohio Theatre, thanked the city for its past and ongoing support of that project, noting that previous Stellar Community dollars paid for a new roof, HVAC, and work to stabilize the exterior with the exception of the front facade and now the READI funds can address the face of the building.

"The next logical step is to work on the exterior because it shows people that we are moving forward with this project and we are serious about it," Auxier said. "We already have drawings in place for the exterior work and marquee. I anticipate having the matching funds raised by the end of November and we will be shovel ready to take bids in January is our goal."

Auxier said the plans are to not change the iconic look of the marquee but to restore the finish and lights and replace the crumbling brick work with a new white glaze brick veneer that is similar to the existing brick.

"Can you imagine the Ohio Theatre marquee all lit up as you drive down Main Street and look at all the Christmas wreaths next year?" Courtney asked. "That will be fantastic."

SUPER OVERLOOK

Josh Kunze said the super overlook project is already in the demolition stage to tear out the old Madison Regatta judges' stand and build a new facility in time for next year's boat races. Due to funding issues, the project will be done in three phases but with the RDC's support those phases could continue with little interruption with the super overlook built first, the seating areas second and the steel superstructure over the overlook third.

He said the project will "probably stretch out past June 1" and then finish after the boat races on the July 4, 2023 weekend.

HMI PARKING LOT

As part of Historic Madison Inc.'s agreement to donate a lot to the city near Bicentennial Park, the city agreed to provide an accessible parking lot and passive lawn park to celebrate Madison's historic leadership and industrial history at the site.

The parking lot would be used by HMI and its visitors but also be convenient for visitors to nearby Bicentennial Park and other features on the riverfront like the super overlook and Lamplighter Park. The lot would accommodate up to 85 cars and golf carts and was an initiative of the original Bicentennial Park plan years ago.

According to Courtney, the work on the super overlook combined with the Riverfront Development Committee's development of the riverwalk and other overlooks over the last 30 years, along with the city's reinvestment in Crystal Beach pool and Bicentennial Park, creates an area that is already popular with so many but will only grow in stature and appeal.

"It is going to be the miracle mile in Madison," Courtney said.

Courtney thanked the Redevelopment Commission for its continued support of projects that make Madison a better place to live and visit. He noted the RDC has leveraged its resources to target improvements in roads and sidewalks, Sunrise Crossing and other economic developments, the PACE program to reinvest in the city's historic district, and now more support for Destination Madison.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Nov. 3, the 307th day of 2022. There are 58 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 3, 1986, the Iran-Contra affair came to light as Ash-Shiraa, a pro-Syrian Lebanese magazine, first broke the story of U.S. arms sales to Iran.

On this date:

In 1908, Republican William Howard Taft was elected president, outpolling Democrat William Jennings Bryan.

In 1961, President John F. Kennedy established the U.S. Agency for International Development.

In 1976, the horror movie "Carrie," adapted from the Stephen King novel and starring Sissy Spacek, was released by United Artists.

In 1992, Democrat Bill Clinton was elected the 42nd president of the United States, defeating President George H.W. Bush. In Illinois, Democrat Carol Moseley-Braun became the first Black woman elected to the U.S. Senate.

In 1994, Susan Smith of Union, South Carolina, was arrested for drowning her two young sons, Michael and Alex, nine days after claiming the children had been abducted by a Black carjacker.

In 1997, the Supreme Court let stand California's groundbreaking Proposition 209, which banned race and gender preference in hiring and school admissions.

In 2014, 13 years after the 9/11 terrorist attack, a new 1,776-foot skyscraper at the World Trade Center site opened for business, marking an emotional milestone for both New Yorkers and the nation.

In 2020, Democrat Joe Biden won the presidency in an election that saw more than 103 million Americans vote early, many by mail, amid a coronavirus pandemic that upended a campaign marked by fear and rancor, waged against a backdrop of protests over racial injustice. As vote counting continued in battleground states, Biden's victory would not be known for more than three days; Republican President Donald Trump would refuse to concede, falsely claiming that he was a victim of widespread voter fraud. Kamala Harris made history as the first woman, Black person and person of South Asian descent to become vice president. Democrats clinched two more years of controlling the House but saw their majority shrink. Republicans emerged with a two-seat Senate majority that would be erased by Democratic wins in two runoffs in Georgia in January.

Ten years ago: The lights went back on in lower Manhattan to the relief of residents who'd been plunged into darkness for nearly five days by Superstorm Sandy, but there was deepening resentment in the city's outer boroughs and suburbs over a continued lack of power and maddening gas shortages. New York's newly relocated NBA team, the former New Jersey Nets, hosted the first regular-season game by a major sports team in Brooklyn since the Dodgers left in 1957; the Brooklyn Nets beat the Toronto Raptors 107-100.

Five years ago: Army Sgt. Bowe Bergdahl, who walked away from his post in Afghanistan and triggered a search that left some of his comrades severely wounded, was spared a prison sentence by a military judge in North Carolina; President Donald Trump blasted the decision as a "complete and total disgrace." Netflix said it was cutting all ties with Kevin Spacey after a series of allegations of sexual harassment and assault, and that it would not be a part of any further production of "House of Cards" that included him. A massive report from scientists inside and outside the government concluded that the evidence of global warming was stronger than ever. Republican Sen. Rand Paul of Kentucky suffered five broken ribs in an attack by a longtime next-door neighbor as Paul did yard work at his home. (Rene Boucher pleaded guilty to assaulting a member of Congress and was sentenced to 30 days in prison.)

One year ago: After serving more than seven years in an Indonesian prison for killing her mother at a luxury resort on the island of Bali, Heather Mack of Chicago was indicted on murder conspiracy charges in the United States and taken into federal custody on her arrival at O'Hare International Airport. Police in western Australia used a battering ram to enter a locked house and rescue a 4-year-old girl, Cleo Smith, who'd been abducted from a camping tent more than two weeks earlier; the suspect in the kidnapping was arrested nearby. (Terence Kelly pleaded guilty to the abduction.) A government advisory committee recommended that all U.S. adults younger than 60 be vaccinated against hepatitis B. The Federal Reserve announced a plan to gradually reduce bond purchases, a first step in withdrawing emergency aid for the economy during the coronavirus pandemic.

Today's Birthdays: Actor Lois Smith is 92. Former Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis is 89. Actor Shadoe Stevens is 76. Singer Lulu is 74. "Vogue" editor-in-chief Anna Wintour is 73. TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's Highlight in History:

On Nov. 4, 1995, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin was assassinated by a right-wing Israeli minutes after attending a festive peace rally.

On this date:

In 1842, Abraham Lincoln married Mary Todd in Springfield, Illinois.

In 1879, humorist Will Rogers was born in Oologah, Oklahoma.

In 1922, the entrance to King Tutankhamen's tomb was discovered in Egypt.

In 1942, during World War II, Axis forces retreated from El Alamein in North Africa in a major victory for British forces commanded by Lt. Gen. Bernard Montgomery.

In 1956, Soviet troops moved in to crush the Hungarian Revolution.

In 1979, the Iran hostage crisis began as militants stormed the United States Embassy in Tehran, seizing its occupants; for some of them, it was the start of 444 days of captivity.

In 1980, Republican Ronald Reagan won the White House as he defeated President Jimmy Carter by a strong margin.

In 1985, to the shock and dismay of U.S. officials, Soviet defector Vitaly Yurchenko announced he was returning to the Soviet Union, charging he had been kidnapped by the CIA.

In 1991, Ronald Reagan opened his presidential library in Simi Valley, California; attending were President George H.W. Bush and former Presidents Jimmy Carter, Gerald R. Ford and Richard Nixon — the first-ever gathering of five past and present U.S. chief executives.

In 2007, King Tutankhamen's face was unveiled for the first time to the public more than 3,000 years after the pharaoh was buried in his Egyptian tomb.

In 2008, Democrat Barack Obama was elected the first Black president of the United States, defeating Republican John McCain. California voters approved Proposition 8, a constitutional amendment outlawing same-sex marriage, overturning a state Supreme Court decision that gave gay couples the right to wed just months earlier.

In 2020, a day after the presidential election, victories in Michigan and Wisconsin left Joe Biden one battleground state short of winning the White House. President Donald Trump falsely claimed victory in several key states and called the election process "a major fraud on our nation."

Ten years ago: New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo said cold temperatures would leave "tens of thousands" of people whose homes were damaged by Superstorm Sandy in need of alternate housing. A 2-year-old boy was mauled to death by a pack of African wild dogs when he fell into their pen from a viewing area at the Pittsburgh Zoo.

Five years ago: China's rubber-stamp legislature made it a criminal offense to disrespect the country's national anthem, punishable by up to three years in prison; the move came amid rising nationalist appeals from the ruling Communist Party. Saudi Arabian authorities began a wave of arrests of dozens of the country's most powerful princes, military officers, businessmen and government ministers in a purported anti-corruption sweep; they included potential rivals or critics of Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman.

One year ago: The Biden administration issued a rule requiring tens of millions of Americans who worked at companies with 100 or more employees to be fully vaccinated against COVID-19 or get tested for the virus weekly. (The Supreme Court rejected that rule in January 2022, finding that the administration had overstepped its authority.) The Biden administration sued Texas over new voting rules, saying that the restrictions surrounding mail-in voting requirements and voter assistance violated federal civil rights protections. A Texas real estate agent, Jennifer Leigh Ryan, who bragged she wasn't going to jail for storming the U.S. Capitol because she was white, had blond hair and had a good job, was sentenced to two months behind bars. Drug gang gunmen stormed ashore at a beach on Mexico's resort-studded Caribbean coast in front of luxury hotels and executed two drug dealers from a rival gang.

Today's Birthdays: Actor Loretta Swit is 85. R&B singer Harry Elston (Friends of Distinction) is 84. Blues singer Delbert McClinton is 82. Former first lady Laura Bush is 76. Actor Ivonne Coll is 75. VMI hears festival reports

BY BOB DEMAREE

Festival reports were given by Ribberfest and Chautauqua coordinators on their events at Monday's meeting of Visit Madison Inc.

Ribberfest coordinator Erin Kindle stated 3,811 tickets were sold, which provided for a two-day total of 7,622. Still, she said Ribberfest was down $20,000 which she attributed to the fact that it was the 20th anniversary event and the committee achieved its goal in that "they wanted to blow the 20th anniversary out of the water, and they did do that." She noted JCBT had provided $40,000 of the $80,000 that had been requested from the county innkeepers tax, and Ribberfest had to absorb the cost difference.

Kindle said Ribberfest will be planning its budget for 2023, along with changing the way it handles sponsorships in getting those determined earlier next year rather than holding off until later in the year. She said the Ribberfest committee has also already begun working towards lining up entertainment for next year's festival.

Trombone Shorty, who was the Saturday headliner this year, brought a lot of attention to Ribberfest. "We had a lot of people reaching out because we had him here," Kindle said. "I anticipate bigger crowds because people see what we're able to do, but also bigger acts coming."

Chautauqua coordinator Kara Hinze reported the streets were packed for this year's festival with patrons arriving by 9:15 a.m. on Saturday, ahead of the 10 a.m. start when the event was scheduled to open each day. With that, the Chautauqua committee has determined that it needs to be ready for the crowds by 9 a.m. in the future.

Overall, Hinze said, "Everything went super smooth. The festival went really well," adding that even with the large crowds there were no incident reports. "In general, everybody was very happy. A lot artists let us know they had record sales on Saturday, which is what they want. They love to see a lot of people but they love to see people who are actually purchasing."

Meanwhile, Kindle is in the process of finalizing plans for the upcoming 40th anniversary Nights Before Christmas Tour of Homes set for Friday and Saturday, Nov. 25-26 and Dec. 2-3.

Republican Township farm proposed for Amish families

BY BOB DEMAREE

A proposal to subdivide more than 1,000 acres of Republican Township land — known for many years as Perkinson Farms — among 25 to 30 Amish families, was introduced to the Jefferson County Plan Commission on Tuesday.

Bill Pettitt, a professional land surveyor with Pettitt and Associates of Hanover, was at Tuesday's plan commission meeting in an advisory capacity to review the proposal, which will involve up to 1,300 acres, before a plan is formally submitted. If the decision is made to move forward, then more detail will be required for further consideration. Plan Commission President Warren Auxier said if that occurs, a public hearing will be held before a decision is made on approval.

Plan Commission President Warren Auxier noted the project does not indicate a need for new roads to be created, but does involve subdividing the acreage among the families that will live and farm there, which is why a public hearing will be required along with contacting adjoining landowners.

The land is located south of State Road 56 in the vicinity of 1000W in Republican Township. The Perkinson Farms were sold in December 2021 to Ardizzone Farms, which in turn sold the property again in September to the Amish, according to Pettitt. "Needless to say, it's not going to stay one big farm anymore," Pettitt said. "There will be 25 to 30 families coming in" with sections being split out for each family on the acreage.

Auxier noted the project does not indicate a need for new roads to be created, but does involve subdividing the acreage among the families that will live and farm there, which is why a public hearing will be required along with contacting adjoining landowners.

In other Plan Commission business, Auxier said a rough draft of the updated zoning ordinance has been prepared, and the plan commission is in the process of reviewing it and beginning to plan for public meetings and public hearings required to be held prior to deciding whether to adopt.

The Plan Commission also approved recommending to the County Commissioners Auxier's re-appointment to the board. His term ends at the end of this year and board members would like to see him retained.

In Tuesday's Jefferson County Board of Zoning Appeals meeting, approval was given to Joshua and Brittany Copeland for property located at 12318 West Deputy Pike at Deputy in Graham Township for a variance from developmental standards from the center of the road. The request that was approved provides for a 50 foot setback from the center of the road to build a 20-foot by 40-foot lean-to on an existing barn that was built before the 90 foot setback was in place.

Brittany Copeland said the barn had been used in the past for tobacco "and since we no longer raise tobacco, we're just looking to repurpose it." She said both the north and south sides each will have a lean-to that will be added, providing space for cattle on one side and camper storage on the other side. "Nothing fancy, just a lean-to off both sides," she said.

MUSIC

The list of venues for this year includes Red Bicycle Hall, Off-Broadway Taproom, Mad Paddle Brewery, Thomas Family Winery, House of Jane Barber Shop, Madison City Hall and The Electric Lady. Each of the stages will feature five acts, playing short one hour sets. And the schedule is staggered so there's always music happening at multiple places at any given moment.

This is the third installment of MadHop, and past attendees have said that part of the challenge, and excitement, of the multi-venue format is planning your day so you can see as many of your favorite bands as possible. You can see people rushing down Main Street with huge smiles on their faces, clutching their music schedule sheet.

If you'd like to see who's playing and where, there is complete info on the MadHopMusicFest.com website. There are also YouTube links to most of the bands' performances so you can get a feel for their style of music.

I'm personally part of the MadHop volunteer corp that helps put this large and complex event on every year, and my specific duty is "Venue Captain" at Mad Paddle Brewery. Just looking at the music line-up at this one location will give you an idea of the breadth and quality of the musical acts coming to town.

At 11:40 a.m. at Mad Paddle we kick things off with a band called Rocket Flies, which is a "jammy" band in the style of Grateful Dead. Next up at 1 p.m. is Trauma Illinois, a straight-ahead rock band that I'm very excited about. 2:20 p.m. brings Buffalo Wabs & the Price Hill Hustle to the stage for a wild and eclectic set that will put you in mind of Old Crow Medicine Show. 3:40 p.m. is Carrollton native Jordan Wilson and his Coalition. And taking us out at 5 p.m. is Cruz Contreras and his band, formerly the Black Lillies, a band that has played numerous times in Madison.

And all that is just ONE of the seven venues! It really just scratches the surface of the wide range of musical talent coming to town this Saturday. If you are reading this before Saturday, tickets are $40 and available on the MadHop website. And to top it off, the weather is shaping up to be amazing, maybe even as high as 80 degrees!

So get your tickets, get downtown, and take advantage of this unique and fun festival. And when you pop into Mad Paddle, be sure to say hello to the tall guy wearing the Panama fedora!

AFTER MAD HOP

THE PARTY KEEPS GOING:

One of the great things about MadHop is how it benefits the downtown businesses. It brings about 700 music fans, most of them from out of town, into the Main Street corridor, and sets them loose after 7 p.m. All those people will be hitting the restaurants for dinner and looking where they can go to keep the party going. Fortunately, with Madison being Indiana's Music City, we have plenty of places featuring live music Saturday night, seven as of this writing.

In fact, Fuzzy Rojas playing at The Central late Saturday night will be fresh off their MadHop set at Off-Broadway Taproom earlier in the day. You can catch them twice ... if you like your Rojas Fuzzy. Oh, and on Friday night at Thomas Family Winery, there is a MadHop Kick-Off Party featuring the Whiskey Bent Valley Boys. It's free to MadHop ticket holders.

"The feedback from the engineers and conversation with the construction companies that do that kind of work is they're all extremely busy and this is an extremely small project for them — those very highly specialized construction companies that can install traffic signals," Steinhardt told the Commission Tuesday.

The city already approved ordering the signals and other equipment needed for the intersection in an effort to expedite the work and not be delayed by supply issues. However, the new intersection still needs to be constructed and the equipment installed and operational to meet the deadline, all reasons to designate an emergency.

"This is one of the first times this has happened for us involving a project but it has happened in the past," Joe Jenner, attorney for the city, said, noting that according to state law the commission can declare an emergency.

Jenner said the process involves the Commission naming the companies it will negotiate with and collect quotes for the work before awarding the project to the "lowest responsive quoter ... at this point in time I think that's what we're left with."

He said the plan is to negotiate with three contractors from the region — Sedam Contracting, All Star Paving Inc. and Dave O'Mara Contractor Inc. ... Generally speaking these are three bidders who do have a history with the city."

"We've never had this situation ... given the moment and time we're in and the environment we're in there's a lot of projects — especially the state highway department with traffic signals and other roadway work — this is one of those little projects that's big to us and important to us but given the grand scheme of everything that was the feedback we got."

Redevelopment Commission originally budgeted $800,000 for that portion of the Sunrise project. What the work will cost now and how it will be divvied up is to be determined and negotiated.

Steinhardt added that after no bids were received after the first advertisement the city and its engineers, in consultation with the contractors, made some adjustments in the requirements to eliminate some aspects that the contractors said were hindrances. But the delay to bid the project a second time may have pushed the Madison project further behind other projects the contractors have accepted.

The plan now is to perhaps split the project up in whatever way it takes to expedite the work so in the end more than one contractor may be hired with the worked shared as they can fit it into their busy schedules. The offers also could be rejected but facing the time crunch that will be a tough decision.

"If it comes in out of our budget that would be a reason to reject it," said Madison Mayor Bob Courtney. "We've rejected a couple of bids with Board of Public Works now because they were outside the budget. This will just really allow us to have more of a private negotiation with three bidders who are already familiar with our budget."

Steinhardt said the city has had conversations with the Sunrise developer and the deadlines are being driven by the occupancy dates of the companies that will lease retail space. "The developer does want to work with us if there is any flexibility in that date but at this time there isn't," he said.

In a related matter, the city is scheduled for a pre-construction meeting related to the sewer project that will provide infrastructure to the Shoppes at Sunrise Crossing commercial development and Residences of Sunrise Crossing housing development.

Steinhardt said completion of the storm water detention basin is well underway and additional plantings are now planned at that site to make the facility less obvious to neighbors.

Greetings To All,
I would like to take a few moments of your time and let you know why I think I am the BEST candidate for Sheriff of Jefferson county.
I believe a good Sheriff should posses confidence with an open mind and a willingness to learn. I am more than confident that I can lead the Office of Sheriff into the future with professionalism and integrity. In doing this I will be open minded to the ideas and voices of the employees, as they are the ones that have been there doing the work.
The Sheriff should posses dedication and knowledge of the peoples wants and needs of which he serves. As your Sheriff, I would be dedicated to the position and would make myself visible and readily available to the public.
The Sheriff should also posses experience combined with common sense.
Ladies and Gentlemen, I've been a LIFELONG resident of Jefferson County!!!! I was born here and raised my family here. I had the want but I was unable to be a police officer as I was not able to provide the life I wanted for my family on an officers salary at that time in my life. What I did do along with my full time job, was volunteer as a Reserve Officer, Jailer, and Dispatcher for 13 years. It was during that time that I gained experience and knowledge that a police officer receives working on the street. The Reserves duties entail a lot of special details such as working functions such as ball games, Jefferson County 4-H Fair, festivals and other county related events. Working those events put me in contact with a lot of citizens of Jefferson County where I learned and listened to their wants and needs and how things could be better or what could be done to provide the best for the county.
After raising my family and retiring, I came back to the Jefferson County Sheriff's Department as a Jail Officer and got to experience how the jail was ran in modern times. From there I became a Special Deputy with Court House Services, assisted with civil process service, and performed tasks assigned by the road deputies. Again, this was a position that put me in contact with the citizens and allowed me to experience how the services of the Sheriff's Office are carried out .
My commitment and dedication to serving those positions NEVER wavered. As your Sheriff, my commitment and dedication will never waiver. I will use all my experience, knowledge and common sense to lead and advance the Sheriff's Office into the future. Together, along with employees of the Sheriff's Office we will work as a team to provide the citizens of Jefferson County the safety and services that they deserve.
I am one of you. I have a lot of the same wants as you and as your sheriff I will not forget where I came from. So, I'm asking you to VOTE for me,TIM DAVIS for Jefferson County Sheriff on Tuesday November 8th.

Hanover men fall 82-78 to IU SE in exhibition opener at home

BY THE COURIER STAFF

Hanover College men's basketball warmed up for the season with an 82-78 loss to Indiana University Southeast in the Midwest Tube Mills River Rumble at Collier Arena on Tuesday.

This year marks the second consecutive year that the two schools, separated by just 40 miles, have squared off in an exhibition game on Hanover's campus.

While Indiana Southeast, coached by veteran Wiley Brown, used just eight players in the game, Hanover coach Jon Miller took the opportunity to send 13 players into action with only one, senior Ty Houston, logging more than 30 minutes.

The game was tight throughout. Hanover led 43-40 at halftime and increased that margin to seven with 12:45 left in the game. But the Grenadiers rallied quickly, taking the lead and jumping ahead by 10 points, their biggest lead of the night, with 8:55 to go.

The Panthers were able to close the gap down the stretch but Indiana Southeast held on for the four-point win.

Both teams were in midseason form offensively as each shot better than 50% for the game. Hanover was 29-for-57 overall (50.9%) and 10-of-29 (34.5%) on 3-point attempts while IUS hit on 55.2% (32-for-58) of its shots, including 9-for-19 (47.4%) from the arc.

Houston scored 22 points on 8-of-13 shooting and also had five rebounds and four assists. Jack Wininger scored 12 points while Bryce Gilman and Max Greenamoyer had 11 points each. Former

Ross Chastain rides the wall on the final lap of the NASCAR Cup Series Xfinity 500 at Martinsville Speedway on Saturday in Martinsville, Virginia.

JENNA FRYER

There's been an internal battle raging inside Ross Chastain as he's clawed his way into NASCAR's championship finale.

He's an eighth-generation watermelon farmer from Florida who was never supposed to make it to the top level of stock car racing.

But he did and it required Chastain to bump and bang his way through traffic from journeyman driver to a top Cup team with race-winning cars. He built a solid list of rivals critical of his aggressive style along the way, and as it became clear Chastain might actually have a chance to race for the Cup title, he started to wonder if his rivals were right about him.

Was he making too many mistakes? Trying too hard? Did he need a different approach?

Doesn't matter now.

With a spot in NASCAR's championship finale in sight if Chastain could somehow pull off a miracle, he went video game-style and used a wall-hugging ride he'd tried as a kid while playing NASCAR 2005 on his Nintendo GameCube.

Two points shy of Denny Hamlin for the final transfer spot to next week's race, Chastain found himself too far behind to make up the ground. So shifted his Chevrolet into fifth gear on the backstretch, deliberately smacked the Martinsville Speedway wall, then took his hands off the wheel.

Chastain let the wall guide the No. 1 the final quarter-mile around the Virginia short track with his foot flat on the gas. He went from 10th to fifth as the breathtaking move shot his Chevy around cars and into the final four.

"This is the best thing of 2022 in motor racing!" two-time Formula One champion Fernando Alonso tweeted on Monday. "We all did this on video games with damage disable. Never thought this could become reality."

The move put Chastain into the championship four for the first time in his career, in his second season of full-time Cup racing with a competitive team. It gave second-year team Trackhouse Racing its first shot at the title, too.

Chastain said he'd been beaten by the move on the video game by his brother at "Dodge Raceway

Bumbling Bengals look to 'flush away' bad loss to Browns

BY MITCH STACY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Playing without Ja'Marr Chase, the Cincinnati Bengals had a rough night.

One that could have ramifications for the rest of the season.

Cincinnati lost its best cornerback when Chidobe Awuzie departed in the first half of Monday's ugly 32-13 loss at Cleveland because of a right knee injury. The 27-year-old Awuzie left the stadium on crutches, and coach Zac Taylor said the injury appears to be severe.

If Awuzie is sidelined for an extended period, it's another tough blow for a Bengals team already playing without Chase because of a hip injury for the dangerous wide receiver.

"This isn't the type of team we are. It's a 17-game season, and this is one game. We weren't at our best, in any phase. I'm confident that's not who we are, and we can make the corrections and flush this one away quickly."

— Zac Taylor
Bengals coach

The growing list of health issues is one of several problems for Cincinnati (4-4), which dropped to 0-3 in the AFC North with its eighth loss in the past nine games in the "Battle of Ohio."

The Bengals were limited to two fourth-quarter touchdown passes by Joe Burrow in the loss to Cleveland. They managed just 36 yards on the ground, compared to 172 for the Browns, and Burrow was sacked five times.

Evan McPherson missed a 47-yard field goal attempt and an extra point, and Cincinnati's defense allowed three second-half touchdowns after holding its opponent without a second-half TD in its first seven games.

The Browns (3-5) had lost four straight games before hosting the Bengals in front of an amped-up crowd.

"This isn't the type of team we are," Taylor said. "It's a 17-game season, and this is one game. We weren't at our best, in any phase. I'm confident that's not who we are, and we can make the corrections and flush this one away quickly."

Burrow threw an interception on Cincinnati's first drive. He also lost a fumble in the second quarter.

The Bengals finished with just 229 yards after rolling to 537 yards in a 35-17 victory over Atlanta on Oct. 23.

"We're a better offense than we put out there tonight, even without (Chase)," Burrow said.

WHAT'S WORKING

Not much, actually. The yards are getting harder to come by for Mixon on the ground, but he did stay engaged as a receiver and picked up some tough yards after his catches. He had a team-high seven receptions for 32 yards as Burrow distributed passes to nine different receivers.

WHAT NEEDS HELP

The Bengals faltered behind an offensive line that was overhauled before the season but still lacks consistency and push. Tackle Jonah Williams allowed two first-half sacks that ended drives. With Chase out, Burrow struggled to make explosive plays.

"We weren't playing collectively," said receiver Tyler Boyd, who had three catches for 38 yards and a TD. "We couldn't get that catch to get the offense going. We didn't protect Joe well. Everything was not going our way."

STOCK UP

Defensive end Sam Hubbard had nine tackles, including a sack, and two quarterback hurries. Hubbard and Trey Hendrickson are getting pressure, but the interior defensive line isn't the same without D.J. Reader and Josh Tupou, both out with injuries.

Portal chaos concern hoops coaches in lower levels

BY DAVE SKRETTA
AP BASKETBALL WRITER

MARYVILLE, Mo. — There is growing fear among college basketball coaches at the lower levels of the sport, the vast majority of which do not make seven-figure salaries, fly around the country in private jets or hang out with rich and famous boosters and fans.

It's a fear that comes with success.

It only takes a couple of marquee players to compete for championships at the Division II or III level, the NAIA or even in low-major Division I leagues. But in an era of freedom of transfer an d name, image and likeness endorsement money, the reality is this: If your program is too good, there's a good chance those prolific players will be playing elsewhere next season, recruited to major programs that can offer them more exposure, opportunities and financial benefits.

When it happens, lower-level coaches who might be coming off a 20-win season could be left rebuilding their rosters and fighting for 10 wins and, potentially, their jobs.

"There's always been an opportunity to poach kids if you want to poach them, but it's all become easier now," said Joe Lombardi, the longtime coach of Division II powerhouse Indiana (Pa.). "I believe in karma. I'm not doing that, OK? But some places it has become a way of life. It's disappointing that people invest in kids and, you know, they get poached.

"They don't just go to the market," Lombardi added. "Some do, but a lot of them are talked into it."

His team reached the Final Four last season thanks largely to shooting guard Armoni Foster, who averaged 18 points for the Crimson Hawks, but who will be playing Division I ball for Buffalo this season. And while Lombardi encouraged him to seek a better opportunity for his final year of eligibility, the coach acknowledges that won't always be the case.

Especially when players no longer have to sit out a year under the NCAA's transfer rules.

"I've had guys that Division I schools made overtures about and I'm eventually going to lose someone, and it might not be amicable," Lombardi said. "I might not be happy with the move. But if you're in it long enough, that will happen."

It happened at Nova Southeastern, the top seed in the NCAA Tournament last year. Sekou Sylla, who averaged 22.4 points and 10.4 rebounds for the Division II program, will be playing for Towson at the Division I level this season.

And it happened at Hillsdale, another strong Division II program, where Patrick Cartier caught the attention of Colorado State. And at Bentley, which saw shooting guard Colton Lawrence follow up a strong season by leaving for Maryland-Baltimore County, a low-major program but nonetheless an opportunity for him to compete at the Division I level.

Even the bluest of the bluebloods have kept their eyes open for lower-level transfers.

Cam Martin, a bruising 6-foot-9 forward, was a two-time All-American for Missouri Southern who chose to continue his career elsewhere. He landed at Kansas, the defending Division I national champion, about a 3-hour drive from the Lions' campus in Joplin but light years away in terms of opportunity and experience.

Martin, who graduated from Missouri Southern and is pursuing his graduate degree at Kansas, went from starting every game and playing major minutes to being a key practice player but rarely seeing the floor in actual games.

"You have the good and bad stories that come of it," acknowledged Dennis Gates, the new Missouri coach who brought three players with him when he was hired from Cleveland State. "But the rules give student-athletes an opportunity, no different than coaches have opportunities now, to represent a different program."

Still, as TCU coach Jamie Dixon admitted, the fact that players no longer have to sit out has changed the dynamic.

"A kid having success at a lower conference than, say, the Big 12, was likely not to transfer and sit out because he's playing well," he said. "He's getting his minutes. Why would he want to sit out?"

When the NCAA removed that impediment, it became easier for players to move on — and move up.

And when NIL legislation came along, allowing players to profit off their celebrity, it created a situation where high-major programs can effectively offer financial benefits unavailable at most lower-level programs.

Throw in the chance to compete at a higher level and it's hard for kids to turn their back on the opportunity.

Fardaws Aimaq remembers playing for Utah Valley in the WAC Tournament last spring, and five or six NBA scouts were sitting in a corner. Aimaq dominated the first half of the Wolverines' game, only to see the scouts get up and walk out, and he recalled thinking, "Why did they leave?" Aimaq texted his advisers afterward, and the answer was simple: "They wanted to know if I was really that good or the competition was not that good."

Aimaq ended up transferring from the low-major school to Texas Tech in the hopes of raising his NBA draft profile this season.

"Leaving was hard," he said, "but it was just the best decision for me business-wise."

Just like it was for Malachi Smith, a prolific shooting guard who spent the last two seasons at Chattanooga but will play for Gonzaga this season, or Johni Broome, a 6-10 forward who transferred from Morehead State to Auburn.

Transfers go both ways, of course. Plenty of players leave high-majors for low-majors, or even lower divisions, where they might go from benchwarmer to starter.

But they are typically easier for big-budget programs to replace.

It's tougher to accept at small schools, though, when a player who might have slipped through the recruiting cracks not only got an opportunity to play but was also developed over time — only to take their game somewhere else.

"There could be a great player at Division III. I will not make an overture for that kid. I will not do it," said Lombardi, the Division II coach at Indiana (Pa.) "Maybe I would if I was 10-20 for three straight seasons — I might then. But I just don't think it's for the good of the kid or the good of athletics."

Colts know cleanup must begin with turnover turnaround

BY MICHAEL MAROT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Indianapolis Colts coach Frank Reich sees the glaring problem on the weekly game film.

Too many interceptions and too many fumbles have led to too many one-possession losses.

Indy watched it happen again Sunday. Two more giveaways cost them scoring chances in a 17-16 loss to Washington, leaving players and coaches alike scrambling to make a turnover turnaround.

"The good thing about these mistakes is no one team is causing them," receiver Parris Campbell said Monday. "It's all internal, it's a all self-inflicted and they can be fixed. But it's got to be fixed now. We have that ability to change it and band together as an offense and fix those things."

For eight weeks, though, the problems have persisted.

Last week, Reich benched 2016 league MVP Matt Ryan one day after he threw two more interceptions in a critical loss at AFC South-leading Tennessee. Despite being inactive against the Commanders, the 37-yeard-old Ryan still leads the NFL with nine interceptions and 12 total giveaways. He's also still tied with Chicago quarterback Justin Fields for the most fumbles (11).

Still, the Colts (3-4-1) were far from flawless following Ryan's demotion. His replacement, Sam Ehlinger, played reasonably well in his starting debut and defending league rushing champ Jonathan Taylor averaged nearly five yards per carry. But each lost fumbles against Washington.

It's not just a handful of players making mistakes. Indy, which shared the league lead in turnover margin last season, is now tied for the most giveaways this season with 16. They're also 31st in turnover margin at minus-8.

And the solution, Reich and his players believe, rests solely in their hands.

"We've taken a lot of pride in being good in the turnover ratio over the years," Reich said. "It's each coach, each player asking what can I add to the equation so we can do a better job? We've got to get back to our ways of winning the turnover battle."

Reich fires offensive coordinator as Colts keep sputtering

BY MICHAEL MAROT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

The move comes two days after another loss, 17-16 to Washington, in which the Colts scored just one touchdown and nine days after Reich announced a quarterback change.

Brady, one of the few but expanding group of minority NFL coordinators, was promoted to the post last season when Nick Sirianni left Indy to take the Philadelphia Eagles head coaching job.

"This was an incredibly hard decision, but one I felt needed to be made in the best interest of the team," Reich said in a statement. "I appreciate Marcus' commitment to the organization, and he made a significant contribution to our offensive success over the last five seasons. I wish him the best moving forward."

Reich does not typically speak with reporters on Tuesdays when players are off. He is scheduled to talk again Wednesday, and the Colts canceled their usual Tuesday availability with coordinators.

Indy (3-4-1) has lost two straight and is 2½ games behind Tennessee in the AFC South, but just one game out of playoff position.

The 43-year-old Brady was considered a rising star in the coaching ranks when Indy ranked second in the league in rushing (149.4 yards per game) and ninth in scoring (26.5) last year.

But this season has been a struggle and Reich has made two uncharacteristic moves in two weeks, hoping to get the offense in gear.

He benched starting quarterback Matt Ryan in favor of Sam Ehlinger last week with Ryan in the midst of possibly the worst season of his 15-year career. He was responsible for a league-leading 12 turnovers.

Ehlinger was solid in his starting debut, completing 17 of 23 for 201 yards against Washington. The former Texas star was sacked twice, lost one fumble and did not throw a touchdown pass or interception but came up less than a yard short on a third down scramble with about 3 ½ minutes to go — a play that could have iced the win.

Instead, the Colts opted to punt and Commanders quarterback Taylor Heinicke took advantage, capping the game-winning drive with a 1-yard TD run with 22 seconds left.

But Brady wasn't the play-caller.

Reich has held that job since returning to Indy 2018 so it's unclear how much will change when the Colts visit New England on Sunday.

Indy's offense is ranked No. 18 in total yards, but has struggled to run the ball most of this season.

It has 16 giveaways, tied for the most in the NFL with the Patriots and New Orleans Saints, and ranks 30th in scoring at 16.1 points.

"This morning we relieved Marcus Brady of his duties as offensive coordinator," team owner Jim Irsay wrote on Twitter. "I wish this good man all the best.

Spouse tires being at-home masseuse

Dear Amy: My husband and I have been together for 16 years, during which time he has always been obsessed with having his back rubbed. More specifically, it is his back, his legs (if we're sitting on the couch), and even his neck while riding in the car.

I am a people-pleaser. I did this to show him I loved him, and it just became the norm.

Fast-forward to two kids, a house to run, and a full-time teaching job, and I can't stand that during our down-time together he asks me to constantly rub his back and legs.

AMY DICKINSON ASK AMY

We have other problems in our relationship that I am working on with a counselor.

I had thought once those problems were fixed, I wouldn't hate the idea of being my husband's in-home masseuse.

However, after telling him no today — and watching him pout yet again — I realize I am just done performing this act of service for him.

I want to enjoy sitting next to him again without the rage that I feel when he asks me to do this for him.

My husband says that this "time together" is what makes him feel loved.

If that's the case, am I doing a disservice to my marriage to refuse to spend our time together massaging his back? — Burnt Out Wife

Dear Burnt Out: If being your husband's "in-home masseuse" is the act of service that makes him feel loved, then what is his act of service that makes you feel loved? I assume it might be something as simple as him allowing you to sit quietly in proximity without requiring you to do anything in particular — in short, letting you do and act however you please.

There is no question that people in intimate partnerships serve one another, and it is helpful to recognize those things your partner might do - oftentimes without being asked — that make you feel loved.

Divorcing parents wonder why daughter is laughing

Dear Amy: Many of your readers seem to have issues similar to my own, and it's great to know I'm not alone.

I'm having a unique problem.

My husband and I just announced to our 13-year-old daughter that we are getting divorced.

We expected anger or sadness. Instead, she laughed. After laughing, she went into her room to FaceTime her friends, and we overheard her still laughing. She refuses to speak to us.

I'm not sure if this is just her expression of discontent, or perhaps something deeper. Have you ever seen a case like this?

AMY DICKINSON ASK AMY

— Concerned in Suburban Chicagoland

Dear Concerned: I've never seen a case like this (I'm not a caseworker), but I've been a case like this. And by "case," I mean: an adolescent basket case coping with divorce.

Adolescents have overlapping emotions that spill out in often unexpected ways. They lack the maturity to sort through their reactions in advance, and so, when faced with really big feelings, sometimes, they — laugh.

Adolescents also wear their awkwardness and embarrassment very close to the surface, and, having laughed — they more or less commit to it.

Your daughter is currently refusing to speak to you.

Now you're finally getting somewhere. She's angry.

Talk to her together. If she doesn't respond but sits there looking hostile, or rolls her eyes, talk anyway. If she runs to her room, talk through the door. Write her a note and slip it underneath. "When you're ready, we want to talk. We also promise to listen."

And then — give her time. Be gentle with her, even if you're frustrated. You should attempt to comfort and reassure her, even if she doesn't ask for it.

To her, your actions likely seem very selfish — even if you believe this is for the best.

Remember that the question hovering over anyone's reaction to stressful news is: "But what about me?" She has valid reasons to worry about her own future. Offer her gentle and honest reassurance.

ASTROLOGY

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Multitasking can make you more productive. However, you might be tempted to pursue several relationships or flirtations at once, too. Someone who is enjoying hanging out or chatting may only be interested in the friend zone.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Keep slugging away at a project. Remain focused on reaching the finish line and don't let social engagements or other distractions slow your progress. Your goal might be self-satisfaction rather than material rewards.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — You may be highly intuitive but you should always use rational thinking as well. You can think things through and arrive at an appropriate response when others are acting on emotions. Enjoy happy feelings, but act on the facts.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Make a favorable impression. Go the extra mile to make yourself stand out in a crowd. Take pride in your appearance to further your standing. Leave the athleisure in the drawer and glow yourself up today.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — You can process more than one piece of information at a time. Share your feelings as well as your imaginative ideas. Speak the right words to win the support and the trust of someone who may treat you like family.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Telling a relevant story can be an important flex today. You can uplift people and avoid tensions by being kind rather than calculating. The ground might be shifting under a key relationship or business situation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — Instead of screening your calls today, consider picking up and saying what's on your mind and in your heart. A surprise treat could put a smile on your face, or a friend could help you fill in blanks in your social calendar.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — Peers apply pressure with a gentle hand. Misunderstandings can melt away if you consider embracing popular opinion. Your charm and friendliness are excellent tools to use to instill trust and gain cooperation today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Share and share alike. Household tasks can be divided up so that one person doesn't carry the whole load. You might hope to be pampered and petted but a family member may Need some help beforehand.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Invite loved ones to discuss their favorite hobbies or share something they enjoyed. Don't let yourself become so engrossed in a project, work, or in your career that you forget crucial and mandatory self-care.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — If you are practical, grounded, and grateful, you can be happy with what you already have. You may feel challenged to sideline some of your material aspirations so that you can spend more time connecting with others.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — The business world may not be receptive to your special talents now. Impulsive behavior can have a detrimental effect on a business partnership. It might be advisable to respond to others with more caution for a time.

ASTROLOGY

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — A window for peace may be open now. Make any amends you need to and accept any olive branches that are offered. Welcome commitments and promises. A change to your finances may seem disruptive but turn out good for you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Explore alternative ways of handling stressful situations. By making an experimental business decision, you may unlock a door to exciting new people or experiences. Learn from someone helpful.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Step out of the ring. Read the room and don't be too aggressive when you should be gentle and sensitive to other people's feelings. Catch up on your sleep so that you can enjoy the weekend with friends.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Use your intuition and imagination to better understand what has been going on behind the scenes. Lend a sympathetic ear or shoulder to a loved one or partner who has exhausted their emotional resources.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Stick to doing what you do best and keep your promises. Put emotional issues to the side and focus on relaxing with friends and family. Your home may become the center of social activity and filled with fun.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Raise the stakes or change your position to get ahead. Rather than just reacting to other people, be proactive and take decisive steps in the right direction. Spending happy hour with coworkers can lead to firmer friendships.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — When you push all the right buttons, you can win the prize. Someone in your immediate vicinity might prove their loyalty in surprising ways. Avoid a temptation to flaunt your freedom or be deliberately provocative.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — It may be the right time to make a serious commitment to a cause, a person, or to a new project. A budding office romance or friendship could blossom under these stars. Treat a partner like your very best friend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Benevolent actions and good humor can bring benefits. A joke could actually give you insights into human behavior that might be worthwhile topics for reflection. Keep your ears open for original ideas and helpful changes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — You may finally have the breathing space to achieve the proper balance between work and play. Making too many changes too quickly may panic someone who is timid or more conventional.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Leave the briefcase at the office. Discussing business and financial affairs could bring dark clouds over a social activity. This could be a better time to enjoy friendships together and to widen your social network.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — Your assessment of a situation may be right on target. However, even if you are right, it could be wiser to keep your opinion to yourself. Don't stir up opposition by making any type of impulsive changes today.

Record-setting 12 players dealt on NFL trade deadline day

BY ROB MAADDI
AP PRO FOOTBALL WRITER

The NFL trade deadline turned into a frenzy with 15 teams making 10 deals involving 12 players and several draft picks on Tuesday.

Edge rusher Bradley Chubb, tight end T.J. Hockenson, wide receiver Chase Claypool, suspended wideout Calvin Ridley and running back Nyhiem Hines headlined the list of players switching teams ahead of the 4 p.m. EDT cutoff.

Miami bolstered both sides of the ball, acquiring Chubb from Denver and running back Jeff Wilson from San Francisco. The Dolphins (5-3) are trying to catch the AFC-leading Buffalo Bills, who got Hines from Indianapolis.

The NFC North-leading Minnesota Vikings (6-1) added Hockenson after placing Irv Smith on injured reserve.

Claypool went from Pittsburgh to Chicago, which unloaded linebacker Roquan Smith on Monday. Smith joins the AFC North-leading Baltimore Ravens (5-3). The Steelers then acquired cornerback William Jackson from Washington.

The NFC South-leading Atlanta Falcons (4-4) sent Ridley to Jacksonville in a complex deal. Ridley was suspended in March for at least the 2022 season after a league investigation determined he bet on NFL games in 2021 while away from the team addressing mental health concerns. The league said the suspension will carry "through at least the conclusion of the 2022 season."

A few teams already made big moves ahead of the deadline. The 49ers (4-4) got star running back Christian McCaffrey from Carolina. That move made Wilson expendable. Wilson, who lead the 49ers with 468 yards rushing, reunites with coach Mike McDaniel in Miami.

The Philadelphia Eagles (7-0) acquired three-time Pro Bowl defensive end Robert Quinn from Chicago last week. The New York Jets (5-3) added running back James Robinson from the Jaguars after losing rookie running back Breece Hall to a season-ending knee injury.

The AFC West-leading Kansas City Chiefs (5-2) added wide receiver Kadarius Toney from the Giants. Arizona got wideout Robbie Anderson from Carolina.

Perhaps most surprising was the lack of activity from the defending Super Bowl champion Los Angeles Rams. Known for making a splash, the Rams (3-4) stayed put.

The 10 trades were a record for the NFL on deadline day.

MEN

Madison Cub Luke Miller, Hanover coach Jon Miller's son, played eight minutes and scored two points while grabbing a rebound.

Indiana Southeast's Anthony Wales Jr. scored 29 points on 11-of-16 shooting to lead all scorers and Jacobi Hendricks had 22 points and six rebounds.

Hanover won the rebounding battle 32-23 but had 17 turnovers to just 10 by the Grenadiers.

Hanover opens the regular season for real on Wednesday, Nov. 9, when the Panthers travel to Louisville to take on Spalding University. Hanover then hosts Wabash on Tuesday, Nov. 15 in its home opener.

After that the Panthers have three more non-conference games before starting Heartland Collegiate Athletic Conference play on Saturday, Dec. 3 at Bluffton. Hanover plays two games in the Wheaton Tournament on Nov. 18-19 then hosts Hope on Tuesday, Nov. 29. The Hanover College women open the 2022-23 season on Friday, Nov. 11 when they face Wheaton in the Wheaton Tournament. They will take on Elmhurst in that same tournament on Saturday, Nov. 12.

The Hanover women will then play in the Wittenberg Tournament on Nov. 19-20 and head to Centre on Sunday, Nov. 27 before finally opening the home portion of their schedule on Wednesday, Nov. 30 against Anderson in the Panthers' HCAC opener.

David Campbell

Former Madison Cub Luke Miller, now a sophomore at Hanover College, scored two points and had a rebound in the Panthers' 82-78 loss to Indiana Southeast in an exhibition game on Tuesday.

STOCK DOWN

Burrow, after throwing for a season-high 481 yards in the win over the Falcons, had a terrible game. It wasn't his worst statistically — 232 yards, two TDs and a 71.4 completion rate — but the game got out of hand quickly, and most of his production came after it was way too late.

INJURED

KEY NUMBER

5 — Cleveland's winning streak over the Bengals, its longest over a single opponent since re-joining the NFL in 1999.

NEXT STEPS

Cincinnati has a six-day week to address myriad issues before the Carolina Panthers (2-6) come to town Sunday ahead of an off week for the Bengals.

Cincinnati plays at Pittsburgh coming out of the break Nov. 20, hosts the Browns on Dec. 11 and wraps up the regular season against Baltimore Jan. 8.

WALL

somewhere in a fake city, somewhere in Florida," but he'd never actually tried it in real life.

In fact, he stressed repeatedly it didn't even cross his mind to ride the wall until it his season was a half-lap away from ending.

"Never once did it cross my mind or ever try it. I want to make that clear. The last time would have been a long time ago before I was even thinking about being a NASCAR driver," Chastain said. "It flashed back in my head on the white flag."

Chastain is now being celebrated in all circles of motorsports: the same driver who during this season of clashing with rivals was turned into a verb when Kyle Busch said "I got Chastained" after an on-track incident.

It was the fastest lap a stock car has ever run at Martinsville, which is celebrating its 75th anniversary this year. The track record was 18.954 seconds. Chastain's final lap was 18.845 seconds and he was hurtling at between 50 and 70 mph faster than the cars he was sailing past as the wall guided him.

NASCAR said Chastain's move was legal.

His competitors aren't sure it should stay that way.

Hamlin crew chief Chris Gabehart noted "the tracks aren't built with this in mind from a safety perspective. Someone could get hurt.... OUTSIDE the track."

Kyle Larson tried a similar move at Darlington Raceway last year and has since wished he'd never set the example.

"It's just a bad look. I'm embarrassed that I did it at Darlington," Larson said. "Maybe if I didn't do it last year, people wouldn't even think to do that, so I'm embarrassed myself and glad that I didn't win (Darlington) that way."

It's not that drivers didn't like the move — Chase Briscoe even tried it on a video game later Sunday night and complained when it didn't work in make-believe — and Kevin Harvick noted Chastain would not have been successful if not for NASCAR's new, durable Next Gen car. He also predicted NASCAR potentially outlawing such moves.

"My guess is that will be the only time you see this. But making a rule is always a feather in the cap!" Harvick tweeted.

Joey Logano even called on NASCAR to act before this weekend's finale at Phoenix Raceway, where the championships will be decided in the Truck Series, Xfinity Series and Cup Series. NASCAR is already shrouded in Xfinity Series controversy after Ty Gibbs wrecked teammate Brandon Jones to win Saturday at Martinsville and knock Jones out of the playoffs.

"As spectacular as it was, as much as it worked, the problem is now the box is open, right?" Logano said. "Now every Xfinity race, every Truck race, every Cup race, no matter the track, this wall riding is going to be a play. That's not good. That's not good.

"I mean, it was awesome, it was cool. It happened for the first time. There's no rule against it. There needs to be a rule against this one because I don't know if you want the whole field riding the wall coming to the checkered flag."

Chastain, now a household name in the racing world, wasn't sure what NASCAR might do about his experiment. All he knows is he'll be racing Logano, Christopher Bell and Chase Elliott next Sunday for the Cup championship.

"I'm proud to be in this circus. I'm proud of my brothers and sisters that I go to battle with. They might get mad at me. It's been wild to race against my heroes," Chastain said. "The craziest thing is when they've been mad at me. I've had crew members be mad at me this year. That's the most humbling experience that I've ever experienced.

"So having more acknowledgment or more smiles my way, whether it was because it was crazy or not, I don't really care. I'm going to take it. I don't get many from the garage. Just them acknowledging that, whether it was good or bad on their end, they acknowledged, they smiled, gave me a thumbs-up and I'll take it."

CFP's first top 4: Tennessee, Ohio State, Georgia, Clemson

BY RALPH D. RUSSO
AP COLLEGE FOOTBALL WRITER

Tennessee, Ohio State, Georgia, and Clemson were the top four teams in the first College Football Playoff rankings of the season released Tuesday night, four days before the Volunteers and Bulldogs square off on the field.

Josh Heupel

Michigan was fifth, followed by Alabama and unbeaten TCU.

Tennessee is No. 1 in the CFP rankings for the first time, starting ahead of a group of teams that have become regulars at the top of the selection committee's top 25. The Volunteers have already beaten the Crimson Tide and LSU, which was ranked 10th.

Tennessee has been one of the season's biggest surprises, starting the season unranked in the AP poll and jumping out to an 8-0 start for the first time since the Vols won their last national title in 1998.

"We've tried to enjoy the journey," second-year Tennessee coach Josh Heupel told ESPN. "Three years ago, it didn't look like this."

Heupel took over after Jeremy Pruitt was fired following a 3-7 season.

Only one team that has been No. 1 in the committee's initial rankings has not made the playoff, but only about half the teams in first top four managed to finish there.

The committee began its weekly in-person meetings at hotel in Grapevine, Texas, on Monday and revealed the first of six weekly rankings.

The final rankings that set the CFP field of four are set for Dec. 4. The 13-person panel is led by a first-time chairman Boo Corrigan, the athletic director of North Carolina State.

Corrigan said there was some consideration for Ohio State and Georgia as No. 1, but Tennessee's victories against Alabama and at LSU won the day.

The Buckeyes' explosive offense and overall dominance gave them a slight edge on Georgia.

He said Michigan's weak nonconference schedule (Hawaii, Colorado State and Connecticut) and Clemson's 5-0 record against teams with winning records gave the Tigers the nod for the fourth spot.

"The wins at Wake (Forest), at Florida State, over N.C. State, over Syracuse, really did push (Clemson) over the top," Corrigan said.

Oregon was eighth followed by Pac-12 rival Southern California at ninth.

The highest ranked team from outside the Power Five conferences was Tulane at No. 19. The highest ranked champion from the Group of Five conferences earns a spot in New Year's Six bowl.

The CFP semifinals are scheduled to be played at the Fiesta and Peach Bowls on Dec. 31, with the championship game set for Jan. 9 in Inglewood, California.

ANALYSIS

Even before the rankings were unveiled Tuesday night, it was clear which teams still have a chance to play for a national championship. A glance at the conference standings reveals 14 contenders, all in the Power Five. Sorry, there will be no Cincinnati-style interloper from the Group of Five this season for the selection committee to consider.

A conference-by-conference assessment of who is in the race and the paths to the CFP, with AP Top 25 rankings.

ACC

Clemson (8-0, AP No. 5)

The Tigers had their streak of six straight playoff appearances snapped last year, but are well positioned to get back, with no ranked opponents left before a likely ACC title game against North Carolina.

No unbeaten Power Five champion has ever missed the playoff. A glance at the Big Ten and SEC suggests getting in as a one-loss conference champion could be dicey for the Tigers.

No. 17 North Carolina (7-1, AP No. 17)

Run the table, beating unbeaten Clemson in the ACC title game, gets the Tar Heels in the conversation, but they'll need some upsets in other leagues to clear the way.

BIG 12

No. 7 TCU (8-0, AP No. 7)

See above, re: unbeaten Power Five champions. The Horned Frogs flirt with disaster weekly and have some defensive issues. That's a profile the selection committee tends to look upon skeptically.

They'll probably need to stay unbeaten to get in and it's going to be really tough for them to stay unbeaten with the way they have been playing.

BIG TEN

Ohio State (8-0, AP No. 2) and Michigan (8-0, AP No. 4)

Both have been dominant. Neither has played a particularly strenuous schedule and that won't change much before they meet Thanksgiving weekend. Still, either is lock by winning out.

Either would stay in the mix by being a 12-1 conference champion. And the loser of the rivalry game at 11-1 probably still holds out hope to get in.

Illinois (7-1, AP No. 14)

The Illini have a game against Michigan the week before the Wolverines play Ohio State. That means Illinois could finish 12-1 with either two victories against Michigan or one against Michigan and one against Ohio State.

It's not likely to happen, but that would put the Illini in the playoff.

PAC-12

Oregon (7-1, AP No. 8), USC (7-1, AP No. 9) and UCLA (7-1, No. 10)

They all need to run the table to have a chance and even then that might not be enough. The Ducks will have to overcome a 49-3 loss to Georgia in their opener.

The Trojans have a bad defense and won't get much of a bump by beating Notre Dame. UCLA played one of the weakest nonconference schedules in the country.

What's the best option for the Pac-12? The guess here is a 12-1 USC with victories against UCLA and Oregon and one-point loss to a good Utah team.

SEC

Georgia (8-0, AP No. 1) and Tennessee (8-0, AP No. 2)

The loser of Saturday's showdown in Athens is not eliminated, especially if it's the Volunteers, with a victory over Alabama already in hand.

Alabama (6-1, AP No. 6) and Mississippi (8-1, AP No. 11)

The Crimson Tide and Rebels can't afford another loss — they play each other in two weeks — but either would breeze into the CFP by winning out. The most SEC-centric scenario the rest of the country needs to root against is Alabama winning out, beating Georgia in the SEC championship game, and leaving the Tide and Bulldogs at 12-1 and Tennessee at 11-1 with a close loss to Georgia.

LSU (6-2, AP No. 15)

A two-loss team has never made the playoff, but the SEC champion has never missed the playoff. If the Tigers beat Alabama and avenge a loss to the Vols on the way to a title they could break precedent.
